

April 25-26, 2023 • Appleton, Wisconsin

Partnership Levels

Community Partner

Community Partners are expected to support the organizing and/or convening of the conference by providing significant quantifiable investment of time, resources or in-kind support of at least $5,000. This will include monthly promotion of the conference to email distribution lists, news bulletins, or newsletters (or other distribution methods). Participation in one of the conference planning committees and/or day-of volunteer staffing during the conference. Other in-kind support is welcome. Community Partners receive the following benefits:

- Organization branding under the Community Partner category on all promotional materials including the conference website with hyperlink
- Two conference registrations
- One 3' x 5' exhibit booth at the conference and a virtual exhibit platform at Whova.com
- Organization logo on event home page, agenda page, Whova conference app, and profile pages

Collaborative Partner

Community Partners are expected to support the organizing and/or convening of the conference by providing quantifiable investment of time, resources or in-kind support of at least $1,000. This will include monthly promotion of the conference to email distribution lists, news bulletins, or newsletters (or other distribution methods). Participation in one of the conference planning committees and/or day-of volunteer staffing during the conference is encouraged. Other in-kind support is welcome. Collaborative Partners receive the following benefits:

- Organization branding under the Collaborative Partner category on all electronic and print promotional materials including the conference website with hyperlink
- One conference registration
- One 3' x 5' exhibit booth at the conference and a virtual exhibit platform at Whova.com
- Company logo on event home page, agenda page and profile pages.

Contact Information

contact Julie Bunczak, Program Manager, Wisconsin Institute for Public Policy and Service, University of Wisconsin System, at jbunczak@uwsa.edu.